

From: Dana Alan Carlton
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 1/19/02 4:37pm
Subject: Microsoft case

Microsoft is a monopoly.

In the United States of America monopolies are not allowed.

Microsoft should be broken up and their influence in the marketplace diminished severely so there is true competition and innovation is allowed to flourish.

Microsoft should be severely punished financially, to the tune of tens of billions of dollars, for their predatory and anti competitive behavior which has allowed them to dominate at the expense of other companies.

The playing field needs to be re-leveled at Microsoft's expense.

Microsoft does not need a slap on the back of the hand.

The U.S. government needs to stop giving Microsoft contracts and to help other competing companies.

Microsoft should be forced to sell off their browser and email products and not be allowed to expand their influence in new markets.

They should not be allowed to provide financing for companies they own in part or whole to gain control of other markets such as high speed internet access.

The Federal government should act quickly, not act years from now.